MERCHANTS PLAN ANNUAL OUTING

There was the usual large attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association last Wednesday evening at the City Hall. Andrew Vireno presided.

A letter was received from Governor James Rolph, Jr., expressing his gratification at having been able to assist Daly City and vicinity in the problem of widening Mission street and San Jose avenue, and stating that he will be glad to do everything possible to assist in the completion of the work.

A letter from the Veteran Firemen's Association of Daly City invited the merchants to attend their picnic at Ye Old Trout Farm, Stevens Creek, Santa Clara county, Sunday, May 24.

The matter of the Daly City Merchants' Association picnic, to be held on August 30, at Oak Cove Park, near San Mateo, came up for discussion. Every effort will be made to make this the grandest picnic ever attempted by any organization in Daly City. The members of the entertainment committee are working diligently on the details, and nothing will be overlooked that may add to the pleasure of all those who are fortunate enough to be present. The parking facilities are being enlarged so as to accommodate a much larger crowd that last year. Arrangements have already been made for plenty of music, and for plenty to eat and drink in addition to the basket lunches which will be taken by the majority of the picnic crowd. There will be plenty of sports of all kinds. There will be dancing and other amusements for all, and if any one fails to have a good time, it certainly will be their own fault.

J. W. Allen appeared before the meeting in behalf of the "Buddy's Poppy Drive," and was given the moral support of the Daly City Merchants' Association and granted permission to use the name in advertising the sale of poppies.

A committee was appointed to attend the meeting of the Boy Scouts at the City Hall on May 12. H. M. Kohn, Fred Mater and Peter Pavlos were appointed on the committee.

Efforts will be made to have a sign placed on Junipero Serra boulevard, directing attention to Daly City.

It was reported that the State Highway Commission has already appropriated the sum of $200,000 toward the widening of Mission street and San Jose avenue. This puts it up to San Francisco and San Mateo counties to do their part and the work will begin.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, June 3, at the City Hall. All business and professional men are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

W. H. CLAY, Recording Secretary.

VETERAN FIREMEN TO HOLD ANNUAL PICNIC

The members of the Veteran Firemen of Daly City have decided to hold their annual picnic on May 24, at the Trout Farm, Stevens Creek, Santa Claar county.

All residents of Daly City are invited to participate in this outing. Those attending should provide a basket lunch. Coffee will be served on the picnic grounds by the members of the committee. The day's program will include races for all, boys and girls, lean and fat, and all others. Come and have a good time. It is suggested that all who desire to make this trip to Stevens Creek meet at the top of the hill at 9 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, May 24.

P. T. A. MEMBERS SELECT OFFICERS FOR COMING YEAR

Forrest, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Grace Talmadge, financial secretary; Mrs. Maud Hanselman, treasurer; Mrs. Anna Owen, historian; Mrs. Eva Page, parliamentarian; Mrs. M. Nelson, auditor.

There was a good attendance of teachers at this meeting, both schools being represented.

The district officers who were present and assisted in the election were Mrs. J. R. Spann, district president, and Mrs. Cora Hoover, district parliamentarian.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served in the Domestic Science room.

COLMA RESIDENTS HONOR GOVERNOR

Governor James Rolph, Jr., was tendered an ovation last Saturday night when about 500 citizens met in Colombo Hall, Colma, to attend the victory banquet of the Twenty-third Assembly Club and the Colma Rolph Club.

Governor Rolph entered the hall amid deafening applause as the orchestra played his favorite song, "Smiles." E. F. Ford acted as toastmaster of the evening and introduced the governor and other noted guests. Attorney Angelo Scampini welcomed the governor to Colma, as did Joseph Garibaldi, chairman of the Rolph Club, and Caesar Restani, San Francisco fire commissioner and leader in the Twenty-third district.

Governor Rolph delivered a most interesting address, in which he thanked the people of the district for the splendid vote of confidence which they gave him last November, and presented Chairman Garibaldi with the beautiful silver loving cup contested for by various Rolph clubs of the north end of San Mateo county and the Mission and Potrero districts of San Francisco. Colma won the cup by casting an 84 per cent vote for Governor Rolph.

Horace W. Amphlett, publisher of the San Mateo Daily Times, was called on by Chairman Ford and paid a high tribute to Governor Rolph as a real Californian and "a governor with a heart."

Inspector Thomas Daly of the Colma police district was presented with a diamond studded gold star as a token of the appreciation and regard of his friends. Lieutenant Jack Coyne of the San Francisco fire department made the presentation speech.

Al Cleary represented Mayor Angelo Rossi at the banquet, and paid a sincere tribute to the accomplishments of the governor.

Delegations were present from the various sections of San Mateo county to greet the governor and assure him of the regard in which he is held here. William J. Feary of the Western Lime and Cement Company and Harry F. Collier represented Burlingame. Dr. J. C. McGoven, Louis Belloni, Dan McSweeney, Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey and Judge Edward Farrell headed the South San Francisco delegation. Peter Lera led a group from Millbrae.

After the banquet, dancing was enjoyed, and vocal solos by Mrs. Joseph Garibaldi also added greatly to the enjoyment of the program.

FAREWELL PARTY IN HONOR OF WELL KNOWN RESIDENT

Mrs. L. White, of Irvington street, was hostess at a farewell party on Thursday evening of last week in her home, in honor of her friend Mrs. V. Lombard, who formerly conducted the Novelty Shoppe on Mission street, prior to the honored guest's departure for her home-land, sunny France. Mrs. Lombard will visit friends and relatives during her trip abroad. A most enjoyable evening at cards was spent by the guests. At a late hour delicious refreshments were served at an artistcally decorated table, to the following: Mrs. V. Lombard, Mrs. H. Grantham, Mrs. I. Yates, Mrs. B. MacCarthy, Mrs. J. Johnson, Mrs. A. Joy, Mrs. N. McNally, Mrs. L. White, Mrs. I. Roberts, Mrs. E. C. Boyle, and Mrs. I. Yates.

ANOTHER PIONEER RESIDENT ANSWERS FINAL SUMMONS

Last Monday, Peter Burke, who made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Eileen Crooker, of Risel street, passed away after an illness of several months. His death came as a surprise to his many friends in this locality, where he was such a familiar figure.

Mr. Burke leaves to mourn his passing a brother, James Burke, and his sisters Mr. M. McDonald, Mrs. A. Mahoney, Mrs. E. Robinson and Mrs. A. Morris. He was the beloved grandfather of Robert Crooker. Mr. Burke was a native of San Francisco, and was 58 years of age.

The funeral was conducted Thursday morning, at 9 o'clock, from the parlor of Suhr & Wieboldt. A requiem high mass was celebrated for the repose of his soul in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church at 9: 30 A. M. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

EAGLES ENTERTAIN AERIE PRESIDENT

The officers and members of Colma-Vista Grande Aerie No. 1849, Fraternal Oredr of Eagles, at their meeting Thursday evening, April 30, had as their guest George S. Duddy, Worthy President of the State Aerie.

Following initiation of a class of candidates, known as the "George Duddy class," made up of candidates from Redwood City, San Mateo, South San Francisco, and Daly City Aeries, the San Mateo County Associated Aeries, Fraternal Order of Eagles, held their regular monthly meeting.

Mr. Duddy delivered an address of welcome to the newly initiated candidates, his remarks covering the field of activity of the Fraternal Order of Eagles very fully, telling the members what is being done by the Grand Aerie committee, headed by Frank E. Hering, editor of the Eagles Magazine, and Conrad H. Mann, managing organizer of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, to put before Congress the importance of passing the Stabilization of Employment bill, to create a permanent bureau to handle this vital problem. He also urged all to observe Mothers' day, Sunday, May 10.

Another attraction of the evening was the first appearance of the Cola-Vista Grande Eagles' band, and from the remarks that were made it was apparent they made a very favorable impression.

After the meeting a banquet was served to one of the largest gatherings of Eagles for some time.

AMERICAN LEGION PLANS BIG NIGHT

At the regular meeting of Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, on Friday evening, May 1, the final returns of the dance given by the Post on the previous Friday far surpassed all expectations. The event was a huge success, both financially and socially. Favorable comment on this successful dance continue to be heard on every corner.

Various committees were appointed to provide entertainment and "chow" at the next meeting on May 15, and the outlook is exceptionally promising for a big night.

Quite a few of the ladies of the Unit attended a joint initiation at the Hotel St. Claire, in San Jose. Mrs. Holt, president of Area No. 2, presided and the affair lasted the better part of the day and included a number of musical treats.

Horseshoe scores were so close during Sunday's session that is seems an absolute necessity to call on outsiders to subdue some of the players who seem to confine themselves to "ringers" only. Quite a crowd gathered at the courts, and criticism was keen, especially on the stance of the Post Commander. An unusual feature was the prolongation of the play due to a number of tie scores having to be unraveled.

MOTHER

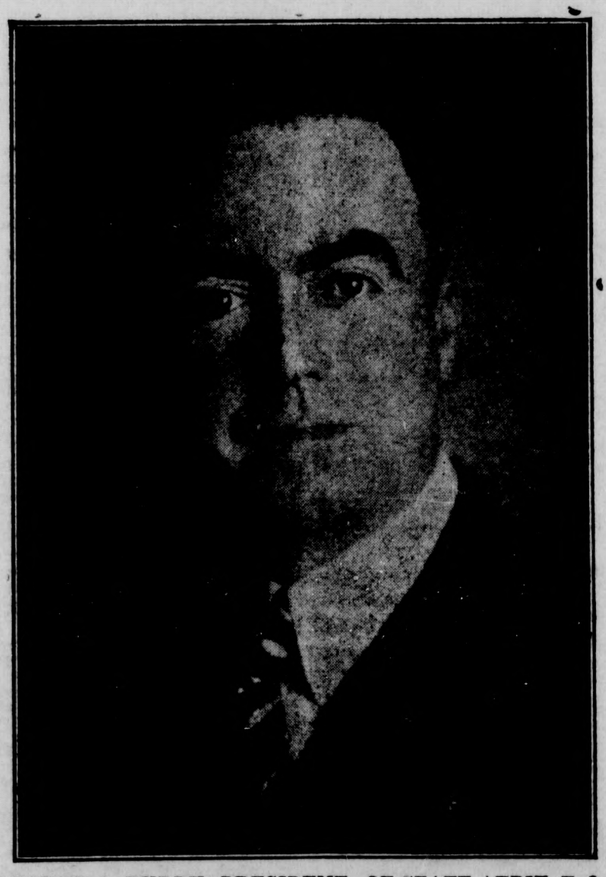
We remember the part you have played in our lives, from childhood to manhood, through joys and through sorrows, in war as in peace, and remembering, we take this occasion to salute you in appreciation of all that your title implies.—Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion.



GEORGE S. DUDDY, PRESIDENT OF STATE AERIE, F. O. E.

Second Judge for San Mateo County

San Mateo county would be given an additionl superior judge by legislation passed by the assembly last Tuesday. George H. Buck is the present judge.

MERCHANTS LOSE IN THE ELEVENTH

Errors and poor batting judgment lost for the Daly City Merchants their second straight over-time game, last Sunday. The local aggregation succumbed to the Fosters' Lunch nine, 6 to 3, after battling eleven innings.

The visitors' margin of victory was the result of a misjudged fly ball that went for a hit, followed by a single, double, and Bud Manuel's error. All of the runs came after two outs in the final frame.

Daly City might have won in the ninth had George Rettig bunted with a runner on third, with one away. Instead of pulling this logical play, George elected to hit away and flew out to the shortstop. Cassili, Fosters' pitcher, got out of the hole by forcing Albrecht to hit a grounder to third base.

Cassilli held the Merchants to eight well scattered bingles, struck out an equal number, walked two and hit one man. He also collected two hits to make the day complete.

Jim Mitchell, Daly City's new pitcher, gave a good account of himself, despite the poor support he received. "Mitch" twirled eight scoreless innings. In four of these frames he retired the side with a man on third base and no outs. Jim was responsible for only two runs, and struck out eight men. Not bad for the first start in nearly a year.

Disregarding Rettig's so-called poor batting judgment, the incident that later meant defeat for Daly City was recorded in the ninth inning. Sam Hawley, Merchants' right fielder, was hit by a pitched ball and was forced to leave the game, with a badly bruised right arm. Up to that point Sam was the hero of the game, tying the score with a single in the seventh.

Foster's lunch scored the initial run of the game in the third inning. Lopez, left fielder, reached first on Rettig's error, stole second and third and scored on Cameron's overthrow to Bonetti.

The Merchants forged ahead in the fourth frame, scoring two runs on hits by Trowbridge, Albrecht, and Walsh. This lead was shadowed by the visitors in the sixth. Four singles and a sacrifice hit scored two more for Fosters'.

Daly City tied the score with a triple by Cameron and Hawley's single. Both teams had chances to score in the next three innings, but all rallies failed to mature until the Fosters' spurt in the eleventh.

The box score follows:

| Fosters' Lunch | AB. | R. | H. |

DALY CITY RESIDENT MEETS DEATH IN FALL FROM WINDOW

Her eagerness to see fire apparatus rushing by is believed to have been the cause of the death of Mrs. Webster E. Hargens, who plunged three stories to her death from an apartment window at 207 Gough street, San Francisco, on Wednesday night of last week. The tragedy occurred after Mrs. Hargens and other guests had dined in the third floor apartment, home of her sisters, Miss Ann and Miss Gladys Cornell.

Mrs. Everett Ellis, neighbor of the Hargens family in Daly City and one of the guests, told the police that Mrs. Hargens fell out of the window as she leaned out while sitting on the arm of a davenport.

Mrs. Desire Martha Hargens was the wife of Webster Hargens, mother of Robert, Eugene and Richard Hargens, daughter of John and Mollie Cornell, and sister of Mrs. Mary Taylor, Mrs. Ruby Sousa, Anna, Gladys, Orval, Russell and Ralph Cornell.

Funeral services were conducted last Saturday at 10:30 A. M., from Anderson's funeral parlors at Valencia and Twenty-fifth street. Interment was in Olivet Memorial Park.

ABANDON SEWER PROJECT PLANS

The construction of the South San Francisco-San Bruno-Lomita Park sewer project, proposed under the Mattoon act and which raised a storm of protest in the north end, was definitely abandoned last Monday by the San Mateo county board of supervisors, meeting in Redwood City.

The move to abandon construction altogether was sponsored by Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, after Judge R. A. Rapsey, of San Bruno, speaking for that city, said that the Council had asked that the work be dropped. J. W. Coleberd, city attorney of South San Francisco, objected to the move and said that city should have an opportunity to speak before the work was ordered out. His protest, however was overruled.

In dropping the sewer project proceedings, the taxpayers of San Mateo county are compelled to pay all the expenses of the preliminary work, which will exceed $6,000. Whether or not any of the survey work can be salvaged and sold to the cities involved was considered unlikely. It was the opinion of District Attorney Franklin Swart that the county would have to bear the loss with little likelihood of any restitution.

The supervisors adopted a motion ordering engineers of the work to return all records on completed improvements to the permanent files of the county, on advice of District Attorney Swart.

Issuing of bonds to pay the additional $128,000 due on the North Fair Oaks sewer project was authorized by the board.

County Surveyor James S. James, ordered to make a survey of sanitary conditions in Memorial Park, reported that the park was faced with a serious water situation which in his opinion should also be considered in the survey. Surveyor James said it looked now as though the park would be absolutely without water supply by July. He added that the creeks feeding into the park were even lower than they were last fall.

May 29 was the date set for Brisbane to vote on the establishment of a public utility district.

Contract for grading Sneath road, connecting Salada Beach and the Skyline, was let to Frank Bryant, of San Francisco, for the sum of $5,554. The completion of this route will make Burlingame only 20 minutes from the new Sharp park golf course.

Instead of selecting any certain candidates for the state highway patrol examination to choose five more men for San Mateo county, the board voted to refer all applications it had on file to the patrol for examination. In this way, it was said, every applicant will have a chance.

Fred Drake, president of the County Chamber of Commerce, urged the board to have a highway district created to take care of the plan suggested for tunneling the Sierro Moreno mountains back of Spring Valley lakes to the coastside, forming a direct route to the ocean.

DOMENICA DITTERO PASSES ON

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dittero, of Santa Barbara avenue, are extending their condolences upon the death of Mrs. Domenica Dittero, which occurred last Saturday at the home of her son Charles. Mrs. Dittero had been ill for several months. She leaves a son, a grandson, Charles Jr., and a granddaughter, Alma Dittero, to mourn her loss. Mrs. Dittero was a native of Quergne, Italy. She had made her home with her son and his wife for the past two years. The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., at 9:45 last Tuesday morning. Mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul in Our Lady of Perpetual Help church at 10 o'clock. Entombment was in Mausoleum, Holy Cross cemetery.

MOTHER'S DAY IN GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

What the world needs today is Mothers. God-fearing mothers. Sacrificing mothers. Loving mothers. Mothers who find an abiding place in the memories of their children. Mothers such as these should be honored in the Church. In the 11 A. M. service in the Presbyterian church a special Mothers' Day service will be held. Come, out of respect to mother and her God.

In the evening during the 7:45 service this theme will be continued. The world has had some great mothers—the mother of the Wesleys, the mother of Lincoln, the mother of the present King of England, the mother of tthe Rothschilds. Come and hear of them. But, best of all, is your own mother.

EAGLES UNVEIL TABLET IN HONOR OF MOTHER

Famed Monument Circle in Indianapolis, Indiana's capital, will be the scene of a unique ceremony on Mothers' day, Sunday, May 10, when a bronze tablet commemorating the first recorded public plea for observance of the day throughout the nation will be unveiled by the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

The plea was made on February 7, 1904, by Frank E. Hering, of South Bend, twice national president of the order. The occasion of his address was a memorial service conducted by Indianapolis Eagles.

Full recognition of the South Bend man and his appeal has been accorded by the American War Mothers. On Sunday, May 10, 1925, at their invitation, he spoke at the Mothers' day service at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. On November 14, 1929, the War Mothers presented him with a medal, bearring a bar inscribed "Father of Mothers' Day." He is one of only four men ever to receive a medal from the War Mothers. The other three are in the military service.

On July 24, 1930, twenty-three persons who heard the plea twenty-seven years ago signed, under oath, a testimonial which was presented to Hering at the national convention of the Eagles that year.

The 1904 appeal was given a place in the nation's archives through incorporation in the "Congressional Record" in an address to the House by Representative Louis Ludlow of the Seventh Indiana district.

DALY CITY OPPOSES FILLMORE MERCHANTS

The Daly City Merchants are doped to win their second game of the season next Sunday, when they tangle with the Fillmore Merchants on the Jefferson Union high school diamond. The contest is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock.

Fortified behind Jim Mitchell's strong pitching arm, the local nine has a chance to redeem itself for the poor exhibition displayed last Sunday. Every member will be on hand and promise to put across the victory.

The Fillmore aggregation has not had the best of luck this year, losing several close games by errors. Uhl, their pitcher, has twirled several low hit contests. He tosses from the left side and possesse a world of curves.

Sam Hawley will be back in a uniform for Daly City, ready to pinch hit at any time. He will have recovered from the effects of the bruise on his arm. Two other outfielders that were absent last Sunday, Cruchoff and Plansky, will also be in the lineup. The batting order follows:

Fillmore Merchants--Fauss, cf; Esola, 2b; Branch, ss; Barry, rf; Schrimer, lf; Krestchmer, 1b; Fitzgerald, 3b; Iriart, c; Uhl, p; Amber, Evenson, Williams, Preston, Bellomo.

Daly City—Rettig, ss; Trowbridge, cf; Albrecht, lf; Cruchoff or Plansky, rf; Toole, 2b; Walsh, 1b; Beneti, 3b; Cameron, c; Mitchell, p; Hawley, Kelly, Thompson.

BAYSHORE ROAD DEDICATION TO BE HELD NEXT THURSDAY

The official opening of the Bayshore highway will take place next Thursday, May 14. The Redwood City Chamber of Commerce will have charge of the opening ceremony, and Governor James Rolph, Jr., will be the guest of honor.

The road was to have opened informally yesterday, but it was decided to stage the ceremony a week later, when a number of peninsula organizations will join with the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce in celebrating the completion of the unit. It has taken a year to build the 7.4 miles of road, which runs over marsh lands in many places.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

In the recent baseball series Jefferson tied for third place with Palo Alto, San Jose coming in first and Burlingame second.

The three games that Jefferson lost, putting them in third place, were all closely contested, being lost on technical errors; different players dropping flies at critical moments.

Davies bore the pitching burden throughout the series, with Pastorino backing him up behind the plate.

The dreaded "Subject A" will be given to the junior and senior English classes on May 15. It will last three periods, and must contain not more than six mistakes for an A or B grade, and not more than ten mistakes for a passing grade. This is given to let the college preparatory students have an idea of what a college entrance examination in English A really is.

Three of the high school students narrowly secaped serious injury on last Wednesday morning. As they were getting off the street car in front of the high school the driver of a Ford car tried to get by without stopping or even slowing up for the passengers who were getting off the street car. The attention of Chief Doyle was called to the matter, and a citation has been issued to the driver to appear in court. The high school appreciates the efficient work done by the police department in keeping Mission street safe for the pupils and people in general.

On last Friday evening the annual meeting of the Jefferson Union High School Board of Trustees was held for the purpose of organizing the board for the coming year. Mr. Truman Bentley was re-elected president and Mrs. Stella Jensen was re-elected clerk. Both of these trustees have rendered the high school district invaluable service and the patrons of Jefferson High and the tax payers in general are to be congratulated upon their re-election as officials of the board.

On next Tuesday evening at eight o'clock the regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees will be held. A special order of business has been announced, in which the two trustees who were recently re-elected to the board (Mrs. Stella Jensen and Mr. Andrew Vireno) are to take charge of the meeting. The details have not been announced further than that the "trailers" of the trustees—meaning husbands and wives—are invited to be present. The board issued a special invitation for the occasion through Principal James Ferguson to the newly elected Superintendent of the Grammar Schools, Mr. R. L. Crane, and his wife.

A defense of the comic strips, long decried by many exponents of culture, comes from an unexpected source. Rev. William E. Clark of the national illiteracy commission declares that they create a desire for education, because illiterate children and others want to read the printing so as to know what the comic characters are saying. The desire makes them eager to learn to read, he says.

WORLD'S FROG MEET IN ANGELS CAMP

To pick the world's champion jumping frog, Angels Camp, home of Mark Twain's famous frog story, will hold its fourth annual Jumping Frog Jubilee on May 16 and 17. Frogs are being entered from all over the United States, and it is said one is being sent from Berlin, Germany.

Along with the frog jumping contest, the town will turn the clock back sixty-eight years, to 1863, when Mark Twain, famous humorist, living at Jackass Hill, wrote his famous "Jumping Frog of Calveras." A historical parade is also a feature of the event, in which hundreds of vehicles of early day vintage will participate. The old-time fire fighting contest between towns of the Mother Lode, using hand engines that came to California by way of the "Horn" will again be held. Last year, San Andreas captured first honors with its 80-year old engine by throwing a stream of water 168 feet. Fire Chief Brennan, of San Francisco, will be asked to again act as judge of the contest.

A museum displaying thousands of priceless early day relics will be a feature of the Jubilee. One of the relics to be displayed this year is a piece of rope used in the last legal hanging in Calveras county.

NEW FARM BUREAU HEAD

The elevation of Edward A. O'Neal, of Florence, Alabama, to the presidency of the American Farm Bureau Federation is a fitting recognition of one of the outsanding agricultural leaders of the country. He succeeds Sam H. Thompson, of Chicago, who was recently appointed a member of the Federal Farm Bureau.

Mr. O'Neal is a practical farmer who has long been identified with organized agriculture, and a pioneer in the movement for co-operative marketing. He was a member of President Hardin's agricultural conference in 1921, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation since 1923, and vice-president of the American Farm Bureau from 1924 until his promotion to the presidency last month. Commenting on his election, Prof. L. N. Duncan of the Extension Service said:

"In integrity and high purposes, and in his devotion and loyalty to his fellow farmers, Mr. O'Neal stands without a peer in American agriculture. It is a great compliment to Alabama and the South that the greatest farm organization the world has ever known should choose as its leader an Alabama farmer. It is also a compliment to the progress made by organized farmers in Alabama."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

That every citizen is directly responsible for the progress and development of the community in which they live, in proportion to their means and ability.

No man has a right to shirk his share of the responsibility toward making the home city a better place in which to live and prosper.

Some citizens need to be reborn with an unselfish devotion to the home city.

There are a whole lot of men living in every city whose knowledge of the city is limited to the place in which they live and the place in which they work.

Every city needs more optimists.

Optimists are filled with a desire to do, and with faith, trust and confidence they help to improve conditions.

Success comes to those cities who are filled with optimistic men with visions of better things.

Your city deserves boosting. If you are not boosting, get busy!

Mr. Legge can doubtless testify to the satisfaction of obtaining relief from the Farm Board.

By J. H. NEUSTADT

"Farm relief" may come from an entirely unexpected source as the central idea of the American game policy is put into effect, according to officials of the American Game Association.

The idea is adequate compensation in some form to farmers and landowners who practice environmental control to increase game on their lands. And in widely scattered sections where it is being tried out, farmers are reaping returns in varying ways and amounts.

In Pennsylvania, according to the state game conservation commission, some farmers are making more money from selling hunting rights and by-products, such as board, eggs, butter, fresh meat and other farm products, than they do from their crops. Many farmers in Texas, who are actually producing game, are getting as high as $4 a day for hunting privileges.

There are four classes of game and game land, according to the classification of the policy, which advocates the landowner who practices game management be compensated directly or indirectly for producing a game crop it. These classes are "Farm game; and for the privilege of harvesting forest and range game; wilderness game; and migratory game, which inhabits all classes of land."

"Compensation to land-owners for the privilege of hunting may take the following forms," the policy points out: "Cash rental per acre, lease; cash payment per head of game killed; toll system; cash payment per man-day hunted, toll system; payment of part or all taxes on the land; service payment by hiring patrol to protect landowner's property; service payment by installing food, coverts and refuges; and service payment by restocking game."

Sportsmen are to make the payments according to the policy adopted recently by them at the seventeenth American Game Conference here.

MORE MILES OF ALL-YEAR ROAD

The American Farm Bureau Federation states that road work has received considerable impetus from the making available of Federal funds, and that materials which permit the surfacing of more miles of year-round roads are being favored. A long list of states whose road specifications have been published show bituminous type surfaces which offer both low original cost and upkeep expense, and imperviousness to weather conditions.

A highway system which neglects the farmer is damaging to general progress. Secondary roads, bringing rural areas into all-year contact with the outside world, can help solve many of agriculture's problems.

The present time, with low material costs and plentiful labor, is particularly propitious to highway progress. About 80 per cent of money spent for roads goes to workmen. Every time we build a road, we are making an investment that will not only be of assistance in relieving unemployment and aiding business now, but one that will pay profitable dividends far into the future.

Bellamy Foresaw Radio in "Musical Telephone"

Edward Bellamy's "musical telephone," as described in "Looking Backward—2000-1887," strongly suggested present-day radio programs with some additional wrinkles.

"Doctor Leete," he related, "accompanied me to my room when I retired to instruct me as to the adjustment of the musical telephone. He showed me how by turning a screw the volume of music could be made to fill the room or die away to an echo so faint and far that one could scarcely be sure whether he heard or imagined it. If of two persons side by side one desired to listen to music and the other to sleep, it could be made audible to one and inaudible to the other. He explained that by a clockwork combination a person could arrange to be awakened at any hour by music."

On Sunday he heard a sermon transmitted from an "acoustically prepared chamber." "The voice of a man at the pitch of ordinary conversation addressed us with an effect of proceeding from an invisible person in the room."—Kansas City Times.

Still Hope to Locate Savage King's Treasure

A king's treasure—ivory, raw gold, British and Kruger sovereigns and diamonds—valued at £2,000,000 lies hidden somewhere in the Rhodesia bush. It is the buried hoard of Lobengula, the Zulu warrior who founded the Matabele nation, challenged the British might in 1892 and met with defeat. A Johannesburg business man who has already made six attempts to trace the buried treasure, will make a final attempt. The story of the treasure has been told by John Jacobs, Lobengula's one-time "secretary." Lobengula ordered that his ivory and two safes containing a store of diamonds and gold packed in tins were to be rushed into the bush. The leaders of the party were Lobengula, Jacobs, four indunas (native officers), and 14 Matabele, who dug the holes in which the treasure was hidden. One night on their return, Lobengula ordered the indunas to slay all who had taken part in the burial. All save Jacobs and the indunas were assegaied.

Days of '49

The term "Sydney ducks" was applied to bands of criminals who operated in San Francisco in the early Nineteenth century. They consisted mostly of undesirable elements, especially from the penal colonies of New South Wales, Australia, of which Sydney is the capital. They were an idle dissipated set, and in the spring of 1849 formed an organization known as the "Regulators," supposedly to protect the weak from the strong. They developed into a band of robbers, their headquarters being a large tent in the plaza, from which they issued every night on their various depredations. Eventually the citizens banded themselves together and expelled them.

"Tall" Fish Story

A record kept by Thomas Boosey, of England, in 1834, tells of a fish that lived to be fifty-three years old, the Golden Book magazine reveals. "W. Hossop of Bond Hall, Furness," the record says, "placed a small felt-back trout, about 53 years ago, when a boy, into a well in the orchard belonging to his family, where it remained ever since until last week. Then it died, not through sickness or infirmity, but for want of its natural element, water, the severe drouth drying up the spring that supplied the well. The trout's lips and gills were perfectly white. He regularly came to be fed by his master's hand when called by his name of Ned."

Flight of Bees

Maximum speed of bees in the air is 25 miles an hour: usual flying speed, 15 miles an hour. These are not designations for a new type of airplane, says the United States Department of Agriculture, but are estimates on the flights of the bees.

Unladen the bee can fly the 25-mile an hour rate, but the usual flight is 10 miles an hour slower whether the bee is carrying a load of nectar or is on its way to some favorite flower garden, orchard in bloom, clover field or other source of honey.

Explaining Leaning Tower

The fact that the Leaning Tower of Pisa stands depends on the law of statics, which insures the stability of a leaning building whose parts are firmly bound together and whose center of gravity does not project beyond the limits of the supporting foundation. The leaning tower has a spiral stairway within, which is built with increased height on the sides of the lean and decreased height on the sides opposite the lean, thus throwing a greater weight of masonry on the side opposed to the lean.

Valuable Food Experiments

The value of laboratory experiments in the field of foods is pointed out by Lawrence H. Baker in Hygeia Magazine. In natural forms the substance that benefits the human body is often mixed with harmful impurities that may retard its action when taken into the human body.

As soon as a plant or animal tissue is found to yield a substance possessing medicinal value, scientists and the atom chasers seek to isolate the active principles and to reduce them to their utmost simplicity.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM

There has been an Indian problem in the United States ever since its earliest settlement, but that problem is being solved by the gradual obsorption of the Red Man into our general population, according to Secretary Wilbur of the Department of the Interior.

We have about 350,000 persons of Indian blood in the entire country, of whom about one-third are in Oklahoma. The rest are widely scattered among twenty-six states, but even the reservation Indians are intermarrying with the white population and are rapidly assuming the white man's manner of living. A notable exception to this general trend is seen among the Navajos of Arizona, who have a reservation as large as the state of New Jersey and still hold aloof from the paleface.

It is the policy of the government to encourage the remaining Indians to obtain education and training with a view to their giving up reservation life and taking their places among the independent citizenship of the country. There are maintained 203 day and boarding schools for Indian pupils, where instruction, food, lodging and clothing are furnished free by Uncle Sam. These are privileges granted to no other element of our population.

Secretary Wilbur declares that is has become obvious that the Red Man eventually must lose his identity and become as the rest of us, and adds: "From a sentimental standpoint there is much to regret in this fact, but it is none the less inevitable."

LAWS AND CRIME

Governor Roosevelt of New York—who, according to the New York City Times, "may go down in history as the prison reform governor"—has suggested an investigation into the probation system for prisoners. This follows his work in reorganizing the parole system, and in making the punishment fit the criminal as well as the crime.

It would seem that our crime reformers would do well to emulate the example of Governor Roosevelt and turn their attention to improving the existing legal and criminal system, instead of seeking to inflict more restrictive laws on an already over-legislated people.

Crime and punishment have been given little scientific study, and there has never been any endeavor, on a national scale, to adjust parole and probation to modern conditions. Our laws have become steadily more technical and personally restrictive, with amazing increase in organized criminality as the result.

We seem to have lost sight of the fact that it should be the purpose of law to protect the rights and liberties of law-abiding citizens, not to abrogate or cancel them on the dubious theory that by giving the criminal or the honest citizen more laws to break, lawlessness will be lessened.

New inventions are making this more and more a thingless world. To mention only three or four, we have bloodless surgery, wireless telephony, smokeless powder, caffeineless coffee, and now the Germans have developed a nicotineless tobacco. In the meantime there has been no diminution in the crop of spineless politicians.

CARE OF THE EYES

Many persons become blind, or go through life with impaired vision because of neglect of the most ordinary precautions, according to Dr. Steelsmith, Iowa's health dommissioner, who gives some good advice in a recent article.

He declares that the putting of a drop or two of silver solution into the eyes of an infant at birth is a most important matter, as five or six different kinds of germs which may cause partial or complete blindness are liable to gain access to the infant's eyes at that time.

It is also important to keep sharp or pointed instruments, such as scissors, pencils and dangerously shaped toys, away from very young children, and any foreign body which happens to get into the eyes should be given immediate attention. No inflammation of the eyes, however slight, should ever be neglected.

With respect to cross-eyes, Dr. Steelsmith advises that steps be taken to correct this condition very early, and he declares that a child no more than a year old may be taught to wear glasses for straightening the squint, which will in most cases effect a permanent correction. He warns against the use of ten-cent store glasses, or any glasses not prescribed after an expert examination of the eyes.

Considering what a handicap poor eyesight places upon the individual, it is really strange that the simple precautions recommended by health authorities are so frequently and persistently neglected.

AVIATION NOTES

Captain Frank M. Hawks has been at his record-breaking stunts again. He flew from London to Rome in five hours and twent-two minutes, the best previous record being approximately twelve hours. He tried to fly back the same day, but a storm forced him down without mishap near Paris. He later flew from Paris to London in fifty-five minutes.

Miss Helen Keller, the famous blind author, has taken her first airplane ride, from Newark to Washington, where she had luncheon at the White House. She declared she got a great thrill out of the experience.

The dirigible Graf Zeppelin recently carried twenty-five passengers on a round trip between Germany and Cairo, Egypt.

Assistant Secretary Ingalls, in charge of naval aviation, calls the auto-giro the missing link among aircraft, and believes the safety it offers will be an encouragement to prospective flyers.

Italy is preparing to build three fast new planes in an effort to win the next Schneider cup race.

Germans are building a powerful plane of new design, which they expect to reach an altitude of 50,000 feet.

American air line operators transported 8,324,255 pounds of mail last year, for which they were paid $17,798,601, or a little more than $2 a pound.

FOR COMFORT AT SEA

Sea-sickness and other discomforts of ocean travel in stormy weather will be elimianted when the new gyro-stabilizer comes into general use, according to Science Service.

This stabilizer, which is really a huge top made to spin at high speed, has been developed to a practical stage, and several have been ordered for installation in new vessels. The largest so far made weighs 120 tons and its rotor is capable of being spun at the rate of 930 revolutions per minute by means of a 200-horsepower motor. It takes an hour to get the rotor up to full speed, and it will continue to spin for two hours after the power is shut off.

Engineers say that a stabilizer of this size will prevent a 450-foot ship from rolling more than two degrees in a heavy storm.

A new 45,000-ton Italian liner now being built will have three huge gyro-stabilizers, it is understood, and it is expected that this device will be adopted for general use in the finest ocean passenger ships of the future. Stabilizers have been successfully used for some time on yachts and other small craft, and it is believed that they will be equally effective on the largest ships.

If expectations are realized, ocean passengers of the future may be able, regardless of the weather, to eat their meals in comfort, and, best of all, retain them after they are eaten.

A CRITIC'S ERROR

That minor personal habits have no important bearing upon one's ability is illustrated by a little joke that the late General Goethals, builder of the Panama Canal, was fond of telling on himself.

Long before the new obiquitous "coffin nails" became popular, or even respectable, the general became an inveterate cigarette smoker. He also parted his hair in the middle.

When Goethals, then a major, was assigned the difficult task of building the canal in 1907, after other eminent engineers had failed, a Washington newspaper editor commented unfavorably on his selection for the job. After recounting the failures of others to accomplish the task, the newspaper said:

"And what in heaven's name can we expect of a man who parts his hair in the middle and smokes cigarettes?"

Yet Goethals did build the canal, although he continued to part his hair in the middle and smoke cigarettes as long as he lived.

RISE OF A BARMAID

Some years ago Rachele Agostini was a comely barmaid in a modest Italian tavern. She had also been a worker in the fields, a shepherdess and a household servant.

While a barmaid, her employer warned her against her attachment for his son, saying: "Do not let yourself think of him. It would be better that you should die. Married to him you would have no happiness."

But Rachele had a will of her own, and despite the warning of her prospective father-in-law, she married his son. It turned out that she might have done worse.

Although she has seldom been in the limelight, she is credited with having a hand in shaping her country's affairs.

Once she secured the pardon of 300 anti-Facist exiles through her influence with the dictator, Benito Mussolini. And how did this former barmaid obtain such sway over the master of all Italy?

One explanation is that she has tact and good judgment. Another is that she is his wife.

FOLLOWING THE LEADER

It is human nature to follow the crowd. No, it isn't either. It is the herd instinct, and it operates in animals and mammals as well as in men, remarks a writer for the National Automobile Club.

One of the commonest expressions of the herd instinct is to be noted in traffic. Every day of the week in cities the bulk of motor vehicle movement is confined to a very few thoroughfares. On holidays and over week ends the direct or main highways between points are jammed to overflowing while alternative or secondary routes are comparatively deserted.

Originally there may have been some rationalization in the universal choice of a single route. Perhaps the chosen route was the only one available.

It is not thinking, however, that keeps everyone continuing to use the limited number of streets and highways. It is the herd instinct and habit. Not otherwise could one explain why motorists put up with the torpor, the irritation, and the relatively greater danger of congestion.

To think in many cases would be to relieve the strain on such thoroughfares by dictating the wisdom of using secondary or alternate routes not only within cities but between them. To think oneself out of the herd is to find that beauty and placidity, tranquilty and pleasure still flower in modern motordom.

The cabbage is the world's most versatile plant, according to the director of Kew Gardens in London. From one original wild growth, which is still found in Europe, has been developed the present cabbage, kale, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, broccoli and the kohlrabi family. As someone rather aptly said long ago, the cauliflower and the rest are only cabbages with a college education.

BUDDY POPPY HEADQUARTERS OPENED IN SAN FRANCISCO

Headquarters of the San Francisco County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, for the annual sale of "Buddy Poppies" throughout the city during Memorial week ending May 30, have been established at 1263 Market street, Commander Charles J. Gavin, Jr., director of this year's sale committee announced.

These "Buddy Poppies" are assembled in California Veteran hospitals by disabled veterans. In turn they are purchased by the organization and sold to the general public for the benefit of relief, welfare and orphans funds. One cent from the sale of each poppy goes to the National Home for Widows and Orphans of Ex-Service Men maintained by the organization as one of its major activities. All of the other monies are used for local relief purposes throughout the year.

There'll be a frantic "back to the farm" movement if city folks ever hear of the enormous profits to be made in raising wheat and cotton.

Both political parties seem rather reluctant to take the responsibility for what the next Congress may do.

SLEDGE HAMMER BLOWS

Would you hit your automobile with a sledge hammer? It sounds like a ridiculous question, yet that is the effect on your car when it strikes a depression in the road, even when traveling at slow speed. Only the resiliency of tires, springs and shock aborbers tends to save it.

Every time a road or street is dug up, the fill is bound to settle, making a depression, and, as one writer expresses it, "an unseen giant rests beneath the road ready to strike your tires and nerves with his sledge hammer as you drive by—and the faster you drive the harder he strikes."

The way to prevent the activities of this giant is to avoid excavations under the streets by placing a main on each side. This is cheaper in the long run, safer from a fire standpoint where water is concerned, and in the case of wide streets actually uses less pipe than when a single main is used.

Progressive communities are now placing their gas and water mains behind the curb. This avoids the bad appearance, danger and noise of torn-up streets, saves wear and tear on cars and nerves, and is real economy from every standpoint. It is a modern and sensible plan which should be adopted generally. Certainly every one who operates a motor vehicle of any kind would favor its adoption in the interest of smooth streets and highways.

A home-made protective device that really worked is reported from New Orleans, where W. J. Perrins rigged up a contrivance to shoot burglars who might invade his office. It went off as intended and killed John Basile, an ex-convict, while in the act of robbing a desk. More frequently such apparatus kills its inventor.

Devout citizens of Minneapolis who recently listened to a program of church music played on a set of chimes were horrified when the tune was changed and the melody of "How Dry I Am" rang out. The chimes ringer truthfully explained to indignant protesters that he had really played a once popular but now almost forgotten hymn, "O Happy Day," which begins thus:

O happy day that fixed my choice
On Thee, my Savior and my God!

Rev. Patton, of Hull, England, declares that "crimes and misdemeanors are incited and accelerated by the dress that women wear." We think the reverend gentleman's alarm and indignation come rather late. It is doubtful that women's dress or lack of it excites anyone very much in this day and time.

If the optimists are to be believed, business has turned the corner so often lately that it must be dizzy.

CHAPTER XIII

Mr. Absolom McPeake's secretary came into his office and handed him the card of Mr. Elmer Butterworth Clarke. Employer and employee gazed at each other humorously.

"Oh, what a fall was there, my countrymen!" murmured McPeake.

"It's much too bad," his secretary declared. "Such a nice-looking young man, too."

"Does he bear a family resemblance to that terrible old uncle of his?"

"About as much as a hunting watch resembles a grandfather's clock. Shall I show him in?"

"I suppose so. Let's have it over with."

A moment later Elmer was ushered in. McPeake greeted him cordially and after a few minutes spent in polite amenities Elmer ventured to inquire in what condition the estate might be.

"In very excellent shape indeed, Mr. Clarke. All of the minor bills of the estate have been paid, with the exception of current monthly charges; the appraisers have completed their task, their report has been filed and about all that remains to be done is to pay the federal and state income taxes and inheritance taxes, the cost of probate, my fee as executor and attorney for the estate, the few specific bequests contained in your uncle's will and that old mortgage."

"I supposed you had paid the mortgage to avoid interest charges," Elmer remarked.

"Not yet. There isn't sufficient money in the estate to pay it."

"Strange! I gathered from your first advices to me that there was quite a sum on hand in cash, and also a couple of hundred thousand dollars' worth of marketable securities. I also understood that this mortgage was for a sum of forty thousand dollars."

"That is the principal sum. Perhaps I'd better start in at the beginning and tell you the story as your uncle told it to me the day he made his will."

"Perhaps that would be better," Elmer suggested.

McPeake thereupon permitted the blow to fall. For about ten seconds Elmer stared at him unwinkingly—then a slow, amused smile lighted up his face. "So forty thousand dollars, at eight per cent, compounded semi-annually for forty-two years, amounts to all that, eh? Suffering mudcats! I should have known there was a catch in this will somewhere!" And he laughed gently.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Clarke, but there's no way out for us. The record speaks for itself, your uncle's will gives us no alternative, and the next of kin to Benedict Catherton has been discovered and has proved her case." McPeake looked his visitor over humorously. "I could furnish you with her name and address," he suggested. "Then you might hunt her up, court her, marry her and get the money back into the family."

"Thanks. Not interested. There's a girl back in Pilarcitos, Calif., who claims all of my sentimental attention. I hope to tell you I wouldn't lose her for a sum equal to the national debt."

"Bully for you, Mr. Clarke! And by the way, I must say I have never seen a man take such a loss with a smile before. I'll say you're game."

"Can't lose what I never had, Mr. McPeake. By the way, was the record of this old mortgage among my uncle's papers?"

"Oh, yes! Your uncle never destroyed anything."

"Well, if I had found it, I would have suspected that the mortgage had not been paid, otherwise there would have been a copy of the release among his papers. So I would have run the record down and paid it myself. Uncle Hiram worried unnecessarily."

"You would have paid it yourself—with interest compounded?"

"Certainly. A note is a note, just as a bet is a bet."

"But I—well, Mr. Clarke, I was going to suggest to you that we might get together with the present holder of that mortgage and effect a settlement. The deficiency judgment is outlawed and if we made a poor mouth and told her that a large portion of the estate consisted of real estate not readily salable, we might get her to abate the compounded interest. Or we might induce her to accept a lot of dead real estate at inflated values—fix it with the appraisers of the estate to reappraise the property."

Elmer raised his hand protestingly. "You're proposing something dirty, mister," he said evenly. "Get this, my friend: All the dirt rights of the Butterworth tribe stood in the name of my late uncle, and I'm not going to join with you or anybody else to take advantage of a woman. A contract's a contract, and if I lost every dollar of the million dollars I thought I had, that's my funeral and I refuse to attend it!"

McPeake was embarrassed. "Well, don't think any the less of me for suggesting it," he pleaded. "Some day you will think more of me for suggesting it." He smiled smugly, after the fashion of one whose head is quite filled with valuable secrets.

"I suppose it's a lawyer's duty to protect his client's interests, and I suppose, too, it is natural that folks should disagree as to what constitutes sporty treatment," Elmer replied grudgingly, "so I'll forget your suggestion. Just don't make another one like it."

"Fair enough. I'll make one the very reverse of it. Mr. Clarke, for more than a quarter of a century your uncle had a very confidential employee—a sort of chief clerk, manager and man Friday—one Bunker. Bunker is one of those mousy little men who are whipped in the battle of life the day they come into it. A retiring, timid, faithful, obedient, hard-working, brainy, efficient rabbit of a man. His job with your uncle was the first job he ever had—and he is still on the estate pay roll, helping me close up odds and ends of business matters.

"Very early in life he made a mistake. He married—and had children—gave hostages to fortune, as it were. So his job was bread and butter and he never had the courage to quit and seek another. I think it must have occurred to your uncle, from time to time, that the impossible might happen and he would lose Bunker's services, so he promised Bunker he would leave him one hundred thousand dollars in his will. This promise he reiterated from time to time, but when it came to making his will he betrayed

"You Give Me That Ninety Thousand Dollars or Something Heavy Is Going to Drop on You."

Bunker. Cut him off with ten thousand dollars—and if I had not fought him all over the office he would have let Bunker down with five thousand. Poor Bunker is heart-broken, of course." McPeake paused and looked at Elmer meaningly.

"And you are about to propose that I make up the deficit, eh?" Elmer suggested.

"Exactly."

"We'll cross that bridge when we come to it, and first we will ascertain whether or not we have a bridge to cross. I am a young man but I have made this discovery. The Bunkers of this world receive from the world exactly what they merit. Nobody but a fool—and a particularly dumb sort of fool—could work for my Uncle Hiram for more than a quarter of a century and not know that he was inhuman, that he would lie and take brutal advantage of people. I dare say Bunker was important to him because Bunker was so weak he would do the dirty little deeds his master ordered him to do. Is that not so?"

"Well, I'm afraid that, in a certain sense, you are right, Mr. Clarke."

"You bet I'm right. I do not have to see Bunker to know the sort of man he is. I have little pity and little love for such men, and it is a question in my mind whether, by fulfilling my uncle's insincere, unmeant promise, I would be doing Bunker a real kindness. The money would probably turn his head."

"Well, I'll let Bunker argue his own case," McPeake decided. "Now then, our principal debtor is insistent on having the cash, and the only way the cash can be secured is to sell off the real estate belonging to the estate. The properties are covered with old buildings in a bad state of repair, but the income from rents is excellent."

"Are the properties salable?"

"At a price—yes."

"Well, if we hang on until they are salable at a fair price we may be years closing this estate, and in the meanwhile that mortgage will continue to draw eight per cent compounded semi-annually. That's no business, Mr. McPeake. Get an order of court to sell that property at public auction."

"My idea exactly, Mr. Clarke. Your decision does credit to your common sense and business instincts."

"What have you done with that little private banking business—or was it a pawn broking establishment?"

"I've sold it at a very good figure and the probate court has approved the sale."

"When the estate is finally settled, what do you think my share will amount to?"

"Oh, I should say, offhand, a quarter of a million dollars."

"Well, I'll always be a millionaire in Pilarcitos. I've been duly advertised as such and while I continue to pay my bills I'll have the credit rating of a millionaire. That will help. I can go just as far on credit as I can on cash. Just won't go so fast, that's all." He rose to go. "Think I'll go on to New York and see some good shows," he informed McPeake. "Despite the walloping you've handed me, I think I can afford a month or two of Broadway. After all, a quarter of a million is better than a poke in the eye with a sharp stick. I'll hang around Muscatine a few days and sign any papers you may require."

He took a cheerful departure. The instant the door closed behind him McPeake rang for his secretary. "I've always heard that out in California they grow things big," he informed her. "Big potatoes, big pumpkins, big cattle and big boost, but if Elmer B. Clarke is a sample of her manhood, California grows the biggest men I ever hope to see. That boy certainly can take a licking standing up.

"Take a letter to Miss Nellie Cathcart, care Pilarcitos Commercial Trust and Savings bank, Pilarcitos, Calif. 'Dear Miss Cathcart: Your sweetie arrived today and without any preliminary warning I slipped him the fatal tidings, but withholding your identity, of course. He can lose a million dollars and put his bright daydreams behind him with as much grace and humor as if he reckoned his loss in depreciated German marks instead of good red U. S. gold coin. I'm for him all the way. He's a man, and should you permit him to escape you will suffer an irreparable loss. He uses his head entirely for thinking. Pilarcitos is lucky to have him for its mayor-elect. Please see to it that politics don't spoil him. Yours sincerely.'

"Now make out a petition to the probate court for the sale of all the real estate of the Butterworth estate, and I'll have Mr. Clarke and Bunker sign it. Then make out an order of sale for the court to sign, and in about a month from now we'll distribute the estate and send Elmer Clarke back to win the capital prize in the best little love lottery you ever heard of. He won only to lose, and he will lose only to win. That Nellie Cathcart must be a very unusual woman. She had a curiosity to discover whether or not Elmer Clarke could fit Kipling's recipe for manhood. Remember the lines?

If you can meet with triumph and disaster,
And treat those two impostors both the same.

"Well, I'm banking on Elmer."

CHAPTER XIV

The following afternoon, when Elmer again called at McPeake's office, he found Bunker there. The lawyer introduced them. Elmer greeted the old clerk pleasantly but without enthusiasm, and McPeake saw by his quick appraising glance that he was striving to find in Bunker's personality a reasonable excuse to be decent to the old fellow.

They chatted together for an hour and then Bunker withdrew.

"Well, what do you think of Bunker, now that you've met and talked to him?"

"He's a furtive little old rat," Elmer declared promptly. "He took on the protective coloration of his surroundings. Like all weak men, he could, I think, be very cruel. I've been thinking over his case and I've decided not to make him a gift of ninety thousand dollars. I cannot afford the philanthropy, and whenever I turn philanthropist Bunker isn't the sort I'd select as the object of my solicitude. He tells me the old man paid him fifty dollars a month to start and after ten years he was earning two hundred. Not so bad. The federal government doesn't do half so well by its employees. I've slaved ten years and when I quit I wasn't earning two hundred a month. For ten years before he died Uncle Hiram was paying him four hundred dollars a month. As clerks are paid, Bunker has fared far, far better than the majority, and I fail to see where he has any kick coming."

"I had an idea he'd broach the subjete to you, Mr. Clarke."

"Probably afraid to do so. Wanted to size me up first and decide whether I was hard or easy. He'll think it over tonight and call to see me at my hotel tomorrow."

"What makes you think he'll do that?"

"Oh, I noted a speculative gleam in his eyes! And it's what I'd do if I were Bunker."

Elmer was right. Shortly after he had breakfasted next morning Bunker called his room from the hotel lobby and asked permission to come up for a conference. Elmer readily granted it and a few minutes later Bunker, hat in hand and nervously shifting from one foot to the other, was standing before him. Elmer permitted him to stand for two minutes; then he decided that the habit of a lifetime is not readily broken and that Bunker was waiting for permission to sit down.

"Please be seated," he told the old clerk. "I see you have something on your mind. You appear to be somewhat embarrassed."

"I am, Mr. Clarke. There is a litttle matter—perhaps Mr. McPeake spoke to you about it—"

"He did," Elmer interrupted. "You refer to my uncle's broken promise to leave you a hundred thousand dollars for the honest and faithful service you accorded him for more than a quarter of a century. I understand he let you down with a bequest for ten thousand, and that you are grievously disappointed. I would be, too, under the circumstances. I can very well understand your disappointment."

"It's been heart-breaking," Bunker quavered. "After all these years, and my wife building hopes on it, sir, the blow well-nigh killed her."

Elmer nodded. "Still, Uncle Hiram didn't pay you a niggardly salary, Mr. Bunker. Many men in your position earn much less and do not consider themselves ill-treated."

"They don't do the work I had to do," Bunker protested with sudden vehemence. "It's worth four hundred dollars a month to lie and bully and evade and scheme and take advantage of people. That's what I had to do to earn my four hundred dollars a month. It was worth four thousand a month to have to spend ten hours a day in his society."

"I suppose you knew, from years of experience, exactly the sort of man my uncle was?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!"

"Then why did you believe him when he promised to leave you a hundred thousand dollars in his will?"

"I didn't think he'd cheat me. I'd done so much for him, you know; things he couldn't entrust to another human being."

"You mean dirty work—confidential dirty work, don't you?"

"Well, it wasn't pleasant, Mr. Clarke, but I had to do it."

"Were these jobs dishonest?"

"Yes."

"I think I understand your viewpoint. A man would have to pay me a fortune to get me to do things like that for him."

"Quite so, quite so. And he didn't do it!" Bunker exclaimed, his voice, in his excitement and anger, growing shrill. "The dirty dog betrayed me."

"And you expect me to remedy the situation by giving you ninety thousand dollars when I collect my inheritance?"

"You could well afford to, sir. I've given my life to help build up that fortune you've inherited."

"But I cannot afford it, Bunker. I may have a quarter of a million dollars left when the estate is probated and all the debts settled. Surely you wouldn't expect me to give you ninety thousand dollars out of that sum."

"I think I've earned it," Bunker charged doggedly.

"Perhaps, perhaps. But it's contrary to my code to pay anybody ninety thousand dollars for doing dirty, dishonest jobs, Mr. Bunker."

"But those dirty, dishonest jobs have redounded to your benefit greatly, Mr. Clarke."

"Nothing doing," Elmer declared flatly. "You lose all along the line, Mr. Bunker. You played your hand very foolishly and if you erred it is not up to me to correct your error. I'm not a human Christmas tree. The interview is at an end, Mr. Bunker. You lose."

Bunker stood up, trembling pitifully. It was evident to Elmer that the man had nerved himself to a degree of courage never before experienced in all his drab life. "You give me that ninety thousand dollars or something heavy is going to drop on you. I'll bust you wide open if you don't settle with me, Mr. Clarke," he declared.

"Well, don't be so mysterious. Tell me what you've got on me. Perhaps the knowledge may alter my decision. Until you tell me, however, I'll stand pat. I never dodge a rock until it's thrown at me."

Bunker came close and lowered his voice. "For years I kept a double set of books for your uncle—one set for him and one for the collector of internal revenue. I made false entries. Whenever I made a deposit in his bank account I deposited the exact total of the receipts as shown that day on my false cashbook. The excess money was put in a safe deposit box, and whenever there was quite a bit of money on hand I bought bonds for him so they couldn't be traced. Why, the record of schemes we put through to fool the income tax collectors would make a book! We defrauded the government out of a couple of hundred thousand dollars since January first, 1913, and I can prove it, because your uncle hadn't been dead ten minutes before I had his honest set of books out of that office and the fake set in the safe. Now, what do you think about that, Mr. Smarty!"

Rich Level Tracts in the Scottish Highlands

The region known to the world as the Highlands of Scotland has no political or civil boundary. Separated by only a vague line of demarcation from the division called the Lowlands, the Scottish Highlands may be briefly described as that portion of the north and northwest of Scotland in which the Celtic language and manners have less or more lingered until modern times. The "Highlands," as it is usually called, extends diagonally across Scotland from Nairn on the Moray firth to Dumbarton on the Clyde; but the mountainous part of the counties of Banff, Moray, Aberdeen, Kincardine and Perth are also understood to be included in the designation "Highlands." Caithness might be excluded as being a generally level country; but throughout the Highlands there are rich level tracts, none being more so than the eastern division of Ross-shire. The Hebrides or Western isles are included in the Highlands, but the isles of Orkney and Shetland, though to the north, are distinctly excluded, by reason of the Norse origin of their inhabitants.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

May 12 will see the new Palo Alto Community Hospital, located on the Stanford University campus, thrown open for inspection.

Rice is sprouting in the Richvale district, near Biggs, well ahead of the usual time. A record making early harvest is forecast.

What is claimed to be the largest hen's egg in the world, owned by a California man, has a circumference around the center of 6.75 inches.

Rice seeding operation by airplane was started over a 2000-acre area of rice land west of Gridley recently. Four planes of the Merced-Wawona Air Lines are being used. Stanislaus county again ranked in production of milk fat in 1930, it was disclosed by Dr. M. E. McDonald, chief of the State Bureau of Dairy Control, in his annual report just received at Modesto. Stanislaus' total production last year was 11,960,010 pounds of milk fat, exceeded only by that of Los Angeles county, which produced 17,-903,358.

San Leandro and Hayward will hold their annual cherry festival during the first week of June, when the first of an army of pickers has begun to harvest the 1300 tons of the fruit to be raised in the two districts. "Queen Royal Anne," who will be chosen from a group of San Leandro and Hayward girls to rule over the festival, will be crowned by Governor James Rolph.

The California Educational Research Association at its tenth annual convention at Fresno elected Dr. James F. Burach, director of research of the Sacramento schools, as president, to succeed Dr. A. R. Lang, dean of education of the Fresno State College. J. Frederick Ching of Oakland and F. L. Tibbett of Marysville were elected vice-presidents, and Miss Corinne Davis of San Jose State College was re-elected secretary.

San Francisco's living costs were the lowest in the country in 1930, Chamber of Commerce statisticians have found. They ranked Portland second, Seattle third and Los Angeles fourth in a study of fourteen cities. The living cost for the average white wage earner with a family was computed to be $1111 for the year. This was 33.6 per cent under that of the preceding year. For Portland it was $1129;, Seattle, $1281; Los Angeles, $1296; Baltimore, $1372, and Boston, $1429.

The State Legislature has joined the California Newspaper Publishers' Association in an invitation extended to the National Editorial Association for that body to hold its annual convention in California in 1932. Senator Bert A. Cassidy of Auburn is author of a resolution which joins in the invitation and points out the values of California as a convention state. The resolution was passed by the Senate and will be sent to the National Editorial Association. The National Editorial Association is composed of more than 2000 small city and country newspaper editors in the United States.

Trees and shrubs which maye be useful for protection of watersheds and prevention of soil erosion on areas where the establishment of forest growth is especially difficult, are being sought by the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agricultur for testing at the California Forest Experiment Station. The station is working cooperatively with the Bureau of Plant Industry, the Boyce Thompson Aboretum, and the University of Nanking, China, testing Asiatic and other species for watershed value. Japanese and South African stations have been invited to participate in the investigations.

Antelope Valley, famed for its superior alfalfa hay, has at last formed the cooperative marketing association that growers have striven for for some time. Judge John F. McNeil recently reported that all details have been concluded, and that a membership drive is now on. Every alfalfa grower in this section will be urged to join.

Los Angeles was slated for selection as the 1932 convention city for the California Medical Association at a meeting of the house of delegates recently.

California Probation Officers' Association will hold their annual convention on May 18 at the Berkeley Womens' City Club in conjunction with the State Conference of Social Work, which will draw a large gathering to the College City, according to an announcement recently.

For the first time in eight years building permits issued in a single month have passed the $100,000 mark in Santa Rosa. According to Building Inspector Walter G. Stracke, the total amount of permits granted to date since April 1 is $102,000. Stracke predicts a record-breaking year for building, as several big projects are under way.

William Wallace Campbell, Lick Observatory astronomer and former president of the University of California, was elected president of the National Academy of Sciences, according to Associated Press dispatches from Washington. The ten American scientists elected to the academy included Professor Robert H. Lowie, University of California anthropologist, and Joseph H. Moore, astronomer at the Lick Observatory of the university.

Mexico, as Southern California's nearest neighbor, will be the first foreign nation to receive an official invitation to enter a float in the 1932 Tournament of Roses parade, Dr. D. E. McDaneld, Tournament of Roses Association president, announced. As reported previously, the Olympic Games, to be held in Los Angeles next year, will form the keynote of the Tournament of Roses on New Year's Day. All nations sending athletes to the international meet will be invited to enter floats in the parade.

A thorough seurvey of higher education in California, on which to base future development, was favored by a committee representing the University of California, State teachers' colleges and junior colleges, meeting at Sacramento. The committee includes M. E. Deutsch, vice president of the University of California; S. C. Morris, dean of Modesto Junior College, and Alexander C. Roberts, president of the San Francisco Teachers' College. Vierling Kersey, State Superintendent, met with the group.

All of the thirty-four foreign nations represented in Southern California by consular representatives have been invited to co-operate in making the eleventh Orange County Valencia Orange Show and Fair, to be held in Anaheim, June 4 to 14, one of the notable events of California's Fiesta Year calendar. The consuls are expected to help in organizing the national days planned as special events by the committee in charge. It is anticipated the various groups by participating on the various days will make this year's show the most colorful ever held in Southern California. Many of the groups will attend in their unique national costumes and will provide entertaiment typical of their native countries.

Bright and early on the morning of May 18, a sharp-eyed contingegnt of billboard sleuths, working for the state Chamber of Commerce, will start removing 50,000 highway signs which are considered as unnecessary, or a blot on the scenic beauty of the fair State of California. The campaign for sign removals is to last two weeks. Working with the State body is the State Engineer's office, which has issued instructions to employes to yank down signs on the highway rights of way, or private property where the signs have been placed without consent of the owners. Supervisors of various counties have been asked to instruct their road workers to aid by similar action. Similar campaigns in Wisconsin and Pennsylvania resulted in the destruction of 84,000 useless signs and considerably improving appearance of highways in general.

Dates of May 22, 23 and 24 were definitely announced at Pasadena for the third annual show of the Cactus and Succulent Society of America, by Boyd L. Sloane, the president. The show is to be presented in gardens at the corner of Glenarm and Euclid streets. Last year the show was held in the Ambassador auditorium in Los Angeles. In deference to the appeals of cactus enthusiasts of this city, Pasadena was named as the setting for the 1931 exhibition. According to President Sloane, exhibits of cacti and succulent plants from all parts of the world will be displayed. Already, requests for entry blanks have been received from as far east as New Jersey. The membership of the Cactus and Succulent Society is approximately 1200, scattered in all parts of the world and including members of royalty who are cactus fanciers. The original plan to stage the show in the new Pasadena municipal auditorium was abandoned when it was found that the building would not be completed before the tentative dates set for the exposition.

Entries are pouring in from throughout the West for the American Legion's first annual carnival of the clouds, to be held at Bakersfield airport May 10 for the benefit of the legion's welfare fund, officials announced. The show is expected to attract 125 planes and 40,000 spectators.

DRIVERS OF IMMENSE TRUCK CONNECTED BY TELEPHONE

A motor truck so big that it carries two drivers who have to be connected with one another by telephone is in operation in England. It is used for moving heavy machinery, boilers, etc., and is said to be the world's largest motor truck. Its capacity is 100 tons, and becaues of its size it travels only at night. One of the drivers is located in front and the other, who steers the rear wheels, sits in a box-like enclosure attached to the rear of the vehicle. So long is the motor truck that the telephone connection had to be installed to make communication possible between the two drivers.

Brick veneer only an inch thick has been invented by a Detroit man for covering frame buildings.

LIGHT AND HEALTH

Electric lamps of the future will be health-giving as well as light-giving, declares an engineering publication. It is well known that quartz mercury lamps which radiate the beneficial ultra-violet rays have been used by physicians for some time. But these have required expert and careful handling.

Now, it appears, lamps giving off these healthful rays have been developed for use in general lighting, thus performing a double duty. In fact, such lamps are already available, but so far their use hase been restricted principally to home treatment of diseases in which sunlight or its equivalent is necessary.

When the new lamps are adopted for general use, as it is believed they eventully will be, it is expected that they will be of immense benefit, especially to indoor workers who have little contact with the health-giving rays of natural sunlight.

PAULINE FREDERICK COMING TO THE CURRAN THEATRE

When Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth, the Queen," with Pauline Frederick, comes to the Curran Theatre on Monday evening, May 11, it will be the first play to tell the story of Elizabeth and the impetuous Earl of Essex as it really happened. There have been other Elizabeth and Essex plays before, but they have been sentimentalized and colored by the rhetoric and euphony of the times in which they were written.

"Elizabeth, the Queen," one of the sensational dramatic successes of the season on Broadway under the auspices of the New York Theatre Guild, is presented in the spirit of modern drama, and the characters, according to report, emerge as believable and sympathetic human beings and not as bombastic puppets.

Miss Frederick's magnificent vehicle is pronounced a beautifully written, thrilling, exciting play. As the Queen about whom swirled tragic and romantic events, the celebrated star enjoys a role that fits her rare gifts as an actress. Playing opposite to her in the part of the "virgin queen's" favorite lover, Lord Essex, is Ian Keith, an unusually handsome and accomplished stage and screen actor. Other well known players who comprise Miss Frederick's supporting cast of thirty-five, are John Craig, Wyndham Standing, Barry O' Daniel, Chappell Dossett, Stanley Lindehl, A. S. Byron, Marion Burns and Phyllis Lovett.

William Keighley staged the play for Messrs. Belasco and Curran, who are providing a lavish and impressive production of such proportion that a revolving stage will be employed to unfold its many colorful scenes.

A colored man got his nerve together and took a flight in an aeroplane. As he climbed out of the ship on its return to the field, he turned to the pilot and said:

"Suh, Ah has to thank you fo' both of dem rides."

"What are you talking about," said the aviator. "You only had one."

"No, suh," returned the passenger. "Ah done had two—mah first an' mah last."

Now is the time to lay in your supply of Coal.

"Why do you think there's company down stairs?"

"I heard mama laugh at one of papa's jokes."

A certain business man was slowly recovering from a relapse which he had suffered after an operation. The doctor called early in the morning and was frankly relieved to find his patient better.

"Honestly, Mr. Vanastorbilt," he said, slowly, "last night I expected to see you throw up the sponge."

"Ye gods," exclaimed the victim, "did you really leave one inside me?"

Ring us up when you need Building Material.

And did you hear about the man who named his child Montgomery Ward because he was of the male order?

"When is she thinking about getting married?"

"You might as well ask when isn't she."

A black hand letter addressed to a wealthy man demanded $25,000; otherwise they would kidnap his wife. Through error the missive was delivered to a poor laborer, who replied: "I ain't got no money, but I'm interested in your proposition."

Lump Coal — For Furnaces. Hand picked.

Old Gent: "What's your little brother crying for?"

Urchin: "He's not crying for anything; mother just gave it to him."
